Dynamics of leadership and change management

You are a manager, what's next? Demonstrating effective leadership skills when championing organisational change is an acquired ability. Participants must appreciate one's own leadership attributes and reflect how they influence efforts towards organisational change. Leadership and change are inter-related and managers as leaders must demonstrate capabilities in developing organisation change initiatives to remain competitive.

Programme Synopsis

This programme explores key issues in leadership and change management. The topics covered will include leadership dynamics and its impact on change management. Demonstrating leadership decision capabilities when instituting change management strategies. Effective leadership engagement abilities with stakeholders when managing conflicts and making change decisions. Understanding that change is a team effort requiring effective engagement with various stakeholders. This module also discusses, and debates change management capabilities that is inclusive and transparent.

Learning Outcome

After completing the modules, you will be able to:

- Demonstrate effective leadership competencies in implementing and managing change.
- Demonstrate the importance of team dynamics when instituting strategic change in employee mind-set and operations.
- Develop analytical, problem solving and presentation skills.
- Understand the role of leadership in change landscape
- Utilise decision tools in planning and problem resolution.

Delivery Method

Methods of teaching and assessment

- Flipchart presentations for brainstorming
- Group discussions
- Hands-on case studies
- PowerPoint presentations
- Presentation from participants

Target Groups

It is designed for junior or newly promoted managers who aspire to develop competencies in change and leadership. Hence, participants are better prepared when taking charge of change management activities and in managing employee concerns during the change process.
